One – Day Workshop on Creative Writing

Literary Club of Uka Tarsadia University organized a one day workshop on Creative Writing for students and faculties at AV Room, RBSA. The session was conducted by Dr. Raesh Maniar, Poet and Playwright. 10 students along with one faculty volunteered to participate in the event from BBA, B.Com and M.Com streams of B.V. Patel Institute of BMC & IT.

Dr. Maniar discussed that creative writing is a writing that goes outside the bounds of normal professional, journalistic, academic, or technical forms of literature, typically identified it by emphasis on narrative craft, character development, and the use of literary tropes and with various traditions of poetry and poetics.

Participants learned how to use their own life experiences, and the people they know to develop inner (thoughts and feelings) and outer (appearance, habits, behavior) lives for their characters. To see how this can lead participants to create a richer and more interesting stories. So that they can breathe life into the characters and let them surprise audience.

The session was a great experience to the participants and giving them a different dimension for learning new things.
